Currency. But here is the situation, and maybe Mr. Hallstrom has contact with some people at US Bank. In a store in north Omaha, which is where black people live, US Bank has a little office there. A black businessman went to the bank to cash a check that one of US Bank's clients or customers had an account on. The account, in other words, on which it was to be cashed was a customer of US Bank. The woman told him he would have to pay her a $5 fee to cash the check. He said, why is this? She said, well, out here we have a lot of bank fraud. He said, well, I'd like a receipt for the $5 you are charging me because this check was written to me in connection with my business and how will I account for this expense to the IRS? She said, are you threatening me with the IRS, because if you are, I'll have security escort you out of here. Now what I'm ultimately going to try to do is get that bank out of that store. When the manager was called, because the man said, well, let me talk to the manager. He agreed that only in north Omaha, and maybe only that store did they charge this fee. Now that's not anything that the Banking Department of the state would look at, is that true?

SENATOR LANDIS: That's correct, Senator Chambers, to my knowledge.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay.

SENATOR LANDIS: The department would not have authority to reply in that situation.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Thank you. I just wanted that into the public record because I'm going to jump on US Bank with both feet, and, if there is any way I can get state funds out of that bank, I'm going to do it. And if I have to change the law to say that if they discriminate against customers based on race or any of the other categories where discrimination should not take place, the state cannot keep any funds in that bank. Now here is the question I will ask you. Are you aware of whether or not the state has any deposits of its money in US Bank?

SENATOR LANDIS: I don't know the identity of the banks that have deposits, so I can't answer that affirmatively. I do know
